By using clamshells and force plates and pins, this tool ensures that the load is taken only on the outer race of the bearing. With a lengthy career in automotive technical engineering, Mark brings a wealth of knowledge and insight to everything we do. He's picked three stand out products from the Laser Tools range that any mechanic should have on hand - tools that combine clever design with real-world practicality.

Under Bonnet Compact Work Lamp - 10w COB

All mechanics will tell you is that life is much better if you can see what is going on. You can never have enough light! Whether you're working under a car's bonnet, in a wheel arch, or even beneath a truck's cab, everything is easier with a bright, directable light.

In the old days we put up with non-rechargeable battery powered torches which glowed yellow using old incandescent bulbs and you inevitably held it in your mouth! Like everything else, work lights have come a long way.

The Laser 9197 10W COB represents the very best of modern work lamp technology. It features adjustable, swivelling, magnetised end mounts, allowing technicians to attach it to any ferrous surface for hands-free operation, further enhanced to by the inclusion of a motion "wave" sensor allowing it to be switched on or off quickly.

Combined with lithium-ion rechargeable battery technology and two brightness settings, you've got a work lamp that leaves old-school torches firmly in the dark ages!

Engine Timing Kit - for VW Group 1.0, 1.2, 1.4, 1.5 TSi Petrol

Sometimes it feels like the big multinational manufacturers aren't too keen on independent garages! OEM tooling tends to be expensive, complex, and often require specialist knowledge that isn't always readily shared.

At Laser Tools we are very proud of our in house designed tooling solutions. We are known for designing and manufacturing some of the most innovative and user-friendly tooling solutions. It was no accident that we decided to spend over 3 years designing an alternative to the OEM computer-based kit. Our customers asked us to do it, so we did.

Our brief was simple enough – design a kit that was as accurate as the OEM but simpler to use and was not computer based.

Designed initially for the late model 1.5 COD petrol engines from VAG Laser 8824 came out first in late 2023 and it was an instant success.

Over the coming months we added more and more adaptors increasing the applications until we arrived at the 9155 kit which covers 1.0, 1.2, 1.4, 1.5 TSi Petrol.

A kit that does the job as accurately as the OEM kit but without the need for a computer and at less than half the price of the OEM full kit. Brief met.

It is now one of our best products. Many have tried to copy it and 8824 but they are still the original and the best!

Suspension Split Hub Knuckle Spreader

Modern roads are keeping garages busy, thanks to potholes. We all complain, but let's face it: vehicle damage often means more work on the ramps.

Wheels and tyres are easy to sort but when a spring gets broken or a strut gets damaged then the vehicle corner needs stripping.

A common strut-to-hub connection is the simple integrated hub clamp which is either cast in iron or alloy. The strut slides into the hub and a clamp bolt then clamps the strut in place firmly and securely. All good- until it's time to separate the strut from the hub. The clamp needs to be opened slightly and held open while the strut is pulled out.

Wedging a screwdriver into the gap, or even riskier a chisel, usually sees it falling out just when you need it most and can easily damage the strut or hub. I have tried all these methods with little success.

That's where the 8324 Knuckle Joint Spreader shines. It's double ended to give the best contact possible on curved and flat faced hubs. Simply slide it into place and nip up the 10mm bolt with a spanner to around 10NM and the hub will be opened enough to slide out the strut. It will stay open while the tool is in place until you decide to remove it.

A simple to use devise that allows the mechanic to use both hand to complete the job quicker and easier than the alternatives.
